Vision

Lorem ipsum

To assist researchers, communities and policymakers in low- and middle income-countries to adapt to, mitigate and prepare for current and future effects of climate change and migration on health and health care services and to develop more resilient and responsive health systems.

“Environmental migrant health statement Environmental migrant health statement”

Mission

In order to contribute towards this vision, the network has the following mission statement that defines its work.

ClimigHealth is an international interdisciplinary thematic network which aims to explore the nexus between climate change, migration, health and health care. To this end, ClimigHealth integrates diverse academic expertise on the various dimensions of and interactions in the nexus, which cut across disciplines. The network will guide more comprehensive and sustainable responses to address the complex migration and health(care) issues arising from climate change. ClimigHealth also strengthens interdisciplinary educational, research and knowledge translation capacity in low- and middle income countries, with a particular focus on the African region.

ClimigHealth primarily forms a collaborative platform between academics in the North and academics in the South. The network is composed in such a way that involvement from and ownership by the South is secured, thereby integrating a human rights based and equity-focused socially accountable multi-perspective approach.

The network collects 'grass root' information on the impact of the climate change, migration and health(care) nexus on those affected and those at risk'; increases the knowledge base and understanding of the nexus' complex mechanisms; and elaborates meaningful (health care) solutions to address the adverse health outcomes of climate change and migration. Research within the network is interdisciplinary, embraces a wide variety of methodologies and fosters collaboration between and within researchers in the South and the North. This should allow evaluation of health-determining interventions at micro, meso and macro level with special attention to what works, for whom, and where. Research findings from multiple disciplines (health sciences, social and political sciences, environmental and bio-engineering, economical) will be integrated in order to inform policy and policymakers.

Through the network, Climighealth partners will offer scientific advice to policymakers (on request or on own initiative), organise participatory knowledge transfer of evidence-based information with civil society organisations, find the best solutions together with local stakeholders, and provide scientific input for NGOs and activist organizations with an emphasis on independence and scientific integrity. ClimigHealth will be able to build on the solid expertise of the network partners in translating research into policy advice for private and public decision makers and effective interventions, which will prove invaluable to endorse and add value to the findings produced within ClimigHealth. Finally, the network offers a platform where knowledge on the nexus between climate change, migration and health(care) is brought together to cater information seekers and to raise awareness around the theme among the broad public.
